Four Square

How to Play: Draw four even squares on the driveway with chalk. One square for number one (the king, highest rank), 2, 3 and 4 (lowest). The server or king will bounce the ball on the ground then hit it into another square. If the ball comes in your square, it must bounce once in your square before you can hit it into another person's square. If you don't let the ball bounce before you hit it, or if it bounces twice then you are out. When a player is out, the other players move up to take their place, and that player moves to the last square, or to the end of the line, if there are more than four players. The object of the game is to move up to and hold the server's position.
